

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI
Assistant to the President,
California State College, Dominguez Hills

Last week Quincy Jones, the college master architect, published his final and complete master plan which will result in a major institution of higher education in the Dominguez area.

This is a remarkable document, to say the least. The master plan, as developed by Mr. Jones, has already received the acclaim of nationally prominent planners, as well as the Board of Trustees of the California State Colleges.

Behind every master plan is a set of goals, objectives and principles. Behind the master plan for California State College, Dominguez Hills, indeed, at its very core, is the academic plan.

The physical plan, you see, reflects the philosophy, goals and objectives of the educational function which will go or within that physical structure.

The design principles which guide the development of this new college are as follows:

- Design a campus that will always provide a pedestrian experience within the academic core, limiting bicycles to the service road that incircles the academic core.
- This service road will be used also by emergency, delivery, and service vehicles, but not for other traffic.
- Provide parking at the ration of one car for every two students. Locate all parking areas immediately inside the perimeter road which rims the campus site. This perimeter road is open to students, faculty, staff, and public.
- Provide an academic core plan that requires no more than 10 minutes to walk between the two most remote teaching areas.

- Provide an academic environment within a complex of multi-story buildings that has a definite relationship to the scale of a person and his experience, using the device of courts, gardens, and other outdoor areas of varying sizes as a means of creating spaces that an individual will enjoy as he moves from one activity to another.
- Provide the planning for walks, courts, and various outdoor areas that includes the design of "street furniture," such as benches, tables, and lighting standards, and establish a special graphic identification system.
- Provide a landscaping vocabulary that is the result of concern for the functional uses of landscape material but which in turn creates a pleasant experience that one associates with a beautiful garden.
- Provide the equivalent to useable and pleasant patio court and garden which one associates with the California experience, or way of living.
- Provide a concept of utility installations that guarantees economy of installation as well as easy and economical maintenance that is to be provided by a combination system of tunnel and building distribution.
- Establish a vocabulary of building materials and color schemes with concern for long life and minimum maintenance that will insure a pleasant experience for the users.
- Finally, and most important, provide a total environment that permits all users — students, faculty, staff, and community — to feel the commitment of participation.

Blame Pills In Death of Area Woman

Apparent suicide has been listed as the cause of death for Irma Jean Wells, 43, of 2455 Pacific Coast Hwy., Apt. 36, who was found dead Monday by her common law husband.

John Malone told investigators he found his wife dead in bed early Monday morning, the victim of an overdose of sleeping pills.

Police reported the woman had been ill in recent months and had spent 28 days in June in Harbor General Hospital. At the time of her death, she was an out patient at the hospital. It is believed that the overdose of pills came from a prescription obtained from her doctor.
